

About the IPCR Logo

“The Not-Yet-Shining Sun” is currently the logo for The IPCR Initiative. It has been chosen to symbolize the “highest synthesis between truth and community”—which is one way of describing the personal goal of the founder of The IPCR Initiative (i.e. to be loyal to the “highest synthesis of truth and community”).

The logo is, currently, in a state of “not-yet-shining” to indicate the belief of the founder of The IPCR Initiative that most people (including himself) and all human settlements are more in a state of potential—relating to the “highest synthesis between truth and community”—than in a state of realization.

Here is a question: What % of 100% of the resources available to us as human beings do you (kind reader) believe we (collectively) are currently accessing and utilizing for the purpose of contributing to the “highest synthesis of truth and community”? This writer’s commentary on that question is as follows: when that % goes over 50%, the logo for The IPCR Initiative will shine forth... however, by that time it will be of no consequence what the logo of The IPCR Initiative looks like.
